Insurance can provide financial compensation and peace of mind when things go wrong. But premiums can represent a significant cost. You need to choose carefully which risks to insure against.

This briefing explains:

- The types of insurance cover a start-up business should consider taking out.
- How to buy insurance cost-effectively.
- How to get any claims settled promptly.

1 Compulsory cover

As soon as you start a business, you have legal obligations to your employees, to your customers and to the general public.

1.1 All businesses except those only employing close family or where the owner is the only employee must purchase employers' liability insurance.

This covers you against claims from employees for accidents or sickness they may suffer as a result of working for you.

- By law you must have cover of £5 million, though most policies now automatically provide £10 million cover.
- You must exhibit a Certificate of Employers' Liability Insurance at each place of business or provide all affected employees with access to an electronic copy of the certificate (such as on your company intranet). It is advisable to keep it after it has expired.

1.2 It is compulsory for you to have motor vehicles liability insurance.

- All vehicles used on the road must be insured for third-party liability, at least.

2 Optional cover

Most business risks can be insured against.

Whether a particular type of cover is right for you will depend on your risk assessment and the nature and location of your business.

There are several non-compulsory types of insurance cover you may want to consider.

2.1 Legal liability cover is more or less essential, though not required by law.

- Public liability covers you against accidents and injuries to, or the death of, members of the public or damage to property that occurs as a result of your activities. It also covers any related legal costs.
- Product liability covers you against injury or damage caused by faulty goods. This can be important if you manufacture, repair, install or even retail goods.

Legal liability insurance only covers you if you are legally liable for the injury or damage.

2.2 Property cover can be provided for specific risks (eg fire or flood) or, alternatively, for a wide range of risks in one package.

- You should cover your contents, stock and fixtures. If you own your premises, you will need to insure the buildings too.
- You should regularly check that you have sufficient cover.

If you under-insure, any claim will be reduced by a similar amount.

- Claims for wear and tear and gradual deterioration are generally excluded. If you arrange cover on a 'new for old' basis, deductions for wear and tear will not be made from claims for risks which are insured, such as fire or theft. You should check whether your policy includes this cover and that it is sufficient.
- If you rent premises, ask to see the landlord's insurance policy and check the range of protection that is in place.

2.3 Cover against theft by outsiders may not be necessary, if your business does not involve expensive equipment or stock. However, it is advisable for retail businesses.

- Insurers generally want to see a reasonable minimum standard of security.
- Theft by employees is generally not covered, though this can be arranged through a separate 'fidelity' policy.

2.4 Professional indemnity cover protects you

Combined insurance package

Insurance for small and medium sized businesses is often sold in packages that group together the most common requirements, such as employers' liability insurance, buildings and contents, money and business interruption.

- Buying insurance as a package can save time for small businesses, as you only source and negotiate once.
- Some packages are tailored to cover specialist sectors (eg retail, construction or manufacturing).
- Other areas of cover can be bolted on to the package to meet individual businesses' requirements.
- Each insurer or intermediary offers packages comprising different core elements. Check the cover you require against the package contents and add other cover as necessary.
- Motor insurance should be bought separately.

Make sure you receive copies of the individual policy documents so you can check that the cover provided is adequate and to make a note of the warranties to be complied with.

against your legal liability for losses suffered by your customers as a result of your negligent advice.

- This insurance is legally required in certain professions, such as the law, accountancy and financial services.
- It is common in other areas, such as management and computer consultancy, publishing, engineering and design.

2.5 Business interruption insurance (see box) compensates you for extra costs incurred and trading profits lost if your business suffers serious disruption after, say, a fire.

This is also known as 'consequential loss' insurance.

- For example, a manufacturer might have to stop trading for six months while premises were rebuilt and re-equipped or until alternative premises are found.

2.6 Legal expenses insurance covers legal costs such as solicitors' and court fees.

- Many policies offer legal guidance via a telephone helpline.

2.7 You can use insurance to make your business less vulnerable to the illness or death of key employees. Small businesses are often dependent on one or two key members of staff.

- 'Key man' insurance pays out in the event of the death of a nominated employee.
- Income protection insurance schemes can be used to cover employees in the event of long-term sickness, paying their salaries during the period of incapacity. This relieves the business of the burden of paying for a sick employee.
- Private health insurance can help attract and retain good staff. Prompt medical attention can also help employees return to work more quickly.

2.8 Other, more specialised, insurance policies are available to provide cover for particular business situations.

- Money policies cover you for loss of cash or cheques. Shops that hold large amounts of cash will need specially agreed limits.
- 'Goods in transit' cover may be important if your products spend a long time in delivery vans or are especially vulnerable. Hauliers' terms of trade usually place strict (and low) limits on the compensation they will pay.
- Glass cover may be necessary for shop

- windows or any other fixed glass.
- Different types of engineering policy are available for machinery, sometimes including both breakdown and statutory inspection cover. Check that equipment used off-site is included.
- Credit insurance can compensate for debtors who are unable to pay you.
- Travel insurance is strongly advisable for you or your employees if overseas travel is required.
- Computer policies may cover you for breakdowns and for loss of information.
- Private health policies may cover the costs of private medical treatment or pay a lump sum in the event of a 'critical illness'.

3 Home workers' insurance

Many start-up businesses begin life in people's homes.

3.1 Do not rely on your household insurance.

- Ordinary household insurance policies will not usually cover business risks such as employers', public or product liability.

3.2 If you start working from home or using your car for business, your household and motor insurance may be invalidated.

3.3 Special 'working from home' policy packages are available.

4 Choosing an insurer

4.1 Disputes in insurance can and do happen. Claims can be paid late, or not in full, or not at all.

- All general insurance companies should be authorised by the Financial Services Authority (FSA). Most are also members of the Association of British Insurers. Check an insurer is authorised by searching the FSA's online register at www.fsa.gov.uk/fsaregister/search.

4.2 Shop around for advice and quotes.

- Insurance brokers' services are usually free. A good broker will search the market to obtain the best deal for you.
- Banks and building societies can offer good value, but may be tied to selling insurance policies from just one company.
- Get at least three quotes, to ensure you are being offered a competitive rate.
- Be wary of cheap deals. Why are they cheap? What is not being insured?

Personal recommendation is often the best way to find a good adviser. Ask around.

5 How much cover?

Take time to think clearly about the amount of cover you need. Overinsurance is a constant financial drain on your resources, while underinsurance can be fatal to your business.

5.1 There are several principles to consider when deciding how much cover to buy.

- Buildings should be insured for their full rebuilding cost (not forgetting professional fees and the cost of site clearance) and not their market value. If your buildings are leased, check that the landlord has this type of cover in place.
- Insure stock for its replacement cost price, without any addition for profit.
- Plant and machinery should normally be insured on a 'replacement as new' basis.

5.2 If you pay for too little cover, the insurance company is entitled to reduce any claim by the percentage of underinsurance.

- For example, you insure your property, which has a full rebuilding cost of £75,000, for only £50,000. The insurer can reduce any claim you make by the same proportion — ie if you claimed for a genuine £3,000-worth of damage, you would only receive £2,000.

5.3 Most insurance policies require the insured to pay an 'excess' or 'deductible', covering the first part of any loss.

- Make sure the excess on your policy is an appropriate amount.
- You can often negotiate a big reduction in premiums by agreeing to a higher excess.

5.4 Some policies allow you to pay a lower annual premium for your cover if you build up a no-claims bonus over several years.

- You may want to avoid making claims just above the excess, if they would lead to increased premiums in subsequent years.

6 Taking out a policy

6.1 Select cover that matches your needs.

- A combined policy, covering a suitable range of risks, is usually the best solution.
- Policies can be tailored to the requirements of an individual business.

6.2 When filling in the proposal form, disclose anything that might be relevant, even if it is not specifically asked for.

- Failure to disclose relevant facts might lead the insurer to treat your policy as invalid.

6.3 Insurers may demand improvements to the security of the premises before giving cover. For example, they may insist on a particular type of lock or quality of burglar alarm.

- If you have a burglar alarm fitted by an approved installer, you may get a discount. Check that the fitters and the alarm system are acceptable to your insurers.

6.4 Once your proposal form is accepted, you will receive a policy.

- Read the policy document and make a note of any special conditions or exclusions (such as precautions to be taken when transporting cash).
- Keep a copy of the policy (or at least the main details), somewhere off the premises.

6.5 Make a note of the policy renewal date.

7 Making a claim

If you have to make a claim, following a methodical procedure will help ensure it is settled with a minimum of delay.

7.1 Ask your insurer for a claim form.

7.2 Return the claim form, with at least two or three estimates for the work to be done.

7.3 Explain all the relevant circumstances surrounding the claim.

- If an insurer discovers that material facts have been held back, it can damage your claim.

7.4 Wait for the insurance company's go-ahead before starting any work.

- You may be given permission by phone to get urgent work done straight away (eg making the premises weathertight).

Ask for confirmation in writing.

7.5 The insurance company may send a loss adjuster (an independent expert, paid for by the insurer) to check the damage or loss.

7.6 You can employ your own independent expert — a loss assessor — who will charge a fee, which you should agree beforehand.

- A loss assessor needs to be involved from the beginning. It is too late to engage one once you have received an offer from the insurer.
- If you are using an insurance broker, resolving and settling claims is part of the service the broker should provide, at no extra cost to you.
